Information Systems
Lecture Series
Uncharted Territory: Planning the Career You Didn’t Know You Wanted

Presented by:

Lisa Trubitt
Assistant CIO/Policy & Communications
University at Albany
Thursday, February 16, 2012
4:30 p.m., Key Auditorium
(RB Hall Room 202)

Are you are prepared for the job you want? Do you know what skills you need, or how to get them? If you do, that’s great! If you don’t—relax. Learn about some of the core skills that will help you get where you want to go, even if you’re not sure where that is.

Lisa Trubitt

Lisa Trubitt is the Assistant CIO for Policy & Communications at the University at Albany. As an advisor to the CIO, she makes recommendations for improvements in practice and assists in the overall administration of technology services for the University. Her many responsibilities include broad oversight for the IT policy process and communications on behalf of her organization.

Trubitt graduated from the University at Albany with a bachelor’s degree in English in Criminal Justice and a master’s degree in Criminal Justice. She spent several years in academia before embarking on a career with Information Technology Services in 2002.